LOCAL FAVORITES

Philadelphia may be a renowned culinary destination, but it's also home to some bucket-list-worthy comfort-food classics.

CHEESESTEAKS Like Rocky and the Liberty Bell, the cheesesteak is integral to Philadelphia's identity. Pat Olivieri, a hot dog vendor from South Philadelphia, is credited with its invention in the 1930s, when his brother requested grilled beef on an Italian roll. Soon after, a city-wide obsession was born. For a truly local experience, head to the Italian Market, where you'll find PAT'S KING OF STEAKS and its catty-corner rival, GENO'S STEAKS. No matter where you order, a classic cheesesteak is made with thinly sliced, sauteed ribeye beef and melted cheese on a long roll. TIP: To order like a local, ask for "whiz wit" for Cheese Whiz and onions. patskingofsteaks.com, genosteaks.com

HOAGIES No matter its origins—some say it was named after the World War I workers on Hog Island, others the Irish immigrant shipbuilder Hogan—this submarine-style sandwich is a Philadelphia classic. A good hoagie consists of Italian cold cuts, cheese, lettuce, tomatoes and onions piled into an Italian long roll, topped with vinegar and oil, and served cold. The lunchtime favorite became the official sandwich of Philadelphia in 1992. Visit popular spots like CAMPO'S PHILLY CHEESESTEAKS to sample this homegrown specialty. camposdeli.com

SOFT PRETZELS Soft pretzels came to the United States in the 1800s with the Pennsylvania Dutch, who settled in Lancaster County. Popularized in Philadelphia at area farmers markets, soft pretzels were soon being produced at factories across the city. The distinct figure-eight shape of local pretzels evolved to better fit conveyor-belt production. Local chains abound selling fresh-from-the-oven pretzels, or for an Amish-style alternative, look for Miller's Twist in the READING TERMINAL MARKET. readingterminalmarket.org

SCRAPPLE Scrapple derives from panhaas, a German meat pudding that utilizes scraps of meat. The Germans brought the concept with them when they immigrated to the United States. In 1863, Habberset Pork Products, one of the most popular scrapple producers, opened in Media, just outside Center City. Today, scrapple is sliced, fried and served as a side with breakfast. Enjoy some scrapple at breakfast joints like the Down Home Diner or Dutch Eating Place in READING TERMINAL MARKET. readingterminalmarket.org

ROAST PORK SANDWICH Arguably the cheesesteak's more refined cousin, the roast pork sandwich may not be as recognized nationally, but it has an equally fervent local fanbase. (The roast pork sandwich at DiNic's Roast Pork in the READING TERMINAL MARKET earned the award "Best Sandwich in America" from the Travel Channel.) The sandwich's origins are unclear but rooted in Italian-American cooking. At traditional eateries, it is made with thin-sliced roast pork and served on a sesame seed long roll with sharp provolone and lightly salted broccoli rabe. readingterminalmarket.org

WATER ICE Smoother than Italian ice, this local treat can be traced back to Italian immigrants who started selling it from stands in the late 19th century. Carrying on the tradition of Filippo "Pop" Italiano, who started scooping out water ice from his pushcart in 1932, POP'S HOMEMADE WATER ICE is a walk-up storefront on Oregon Avenue with various flavors of water ice. popsice.com
